
It's been a long and remarkable journey for Chris and Isaac, in which the two of them have developed a strong emotional connection with each other. And now in Dead Space 3, all their hard work has paid off - they're able to fight side-by-side again. But this takes us back to an old problem: they're limited to facing only one enemy at a time (or death). It means that their partner needs protection or else they'll be killed by the nightmarish creations of Necromorph Marker Sixteen. It means that when the day is saved, their love is still lost in space.

Fortunately in Dead Space 3, they've at least got a third wheel with them to deal with these problems. That's because in this game, they're able to take one of their loyal followers along on their missions. This allows them to distribute the responsibility for their own safety among several people. Instead of having only one person watch Isaac or Chris' back, there are now two people watching it instead! And instead of taking up all the slack by himself, the third wheeler can take only half the slack - allowing Chris and Isaac to work together more efficiently to defeat their foes.

This brings us to the real topic of this article: not who this third wheeler is, or who they're likely to be. Instead, we need to talk about all the ways in which these "third wheelers" will be able to protect those they've sworn their allegiance to. After all, as invaluable as they are - and as good as their intentions may be - occasionally they will still screw up and let the one they're protecting get killed somehow. It's just a matter of course! This is especially true when we take into account all the different ways that both Chris and Isaac can bite it at any time, and then leave their followers alone with only a Plasma Cutter and a grenade launcher for protection. Not very safe! That's why it's important for Chris or Isaac to have at least one third wheeler with them, to be able to maintain their safety in these perilous situations.

To help do this, there are several different ways that the third wheelers in Dead Space 3 can protect both Isaac and Chris in dangerous situations. So let's start listing them below:

First of all, let's talk about the most obvious way that the partner can protect our heroes when things get messy - by shooting at things! This is one of Chris' abilities when taking care of himself on his own, so he gets an automatic third wheel. But even though he's adept at this - and always manages to come through for Isaac and himself - he's still not as good as Isaac or Chris, even just one time. After all, Chris and Isaac can kill several Necromorphs with just a single bullet each, while one partner watching their backs has only just enough firepower to take down such a small number of enemies. This means that occasionally they might still face huge dangers without the help of their third wheeler.

This is especially true if we consider all the times in which both Isaac and Chris might be taken out at the same time.
